“How have we lost the whole person,” says Mr. Darrow. “Increased health-care spending has driven us to focus on the disease, not the patient. We’ve lost sight of the whole person.”

“Darrow’s individual and group counseling services are a model of what a patient-centered approach can be. He’s not just a doctor; he’s a person who understands the patient’s experience. He’s a person who understands the patient’s experience. He’s a person who understands the patient’s experience.”
